

Common English Homophones

aye - eye - I

axel - axle

awe - oar - or - ore

away - aweigh

aural - oral

auk - orc

auger - augur

ate - eight

aren't - aunt

arc - ark

ante - - anti -

altar - alter

alms - arms

allowed - aloud

all - awl

ail - ale

ad - add

accessary - accessory

you'll - yule

yoke - yolk

yaw - yore - your - you're

wood - would

woe - whoa

douse - dowse

done - dun

doe - do - dough

discreet - discrete

die - dye

dew - due

deviser - divisor

desert - dessert

dear - deer

days - daze

dam - damn

cymbal - symbol

curb - herb

cue - kayo - queue

Common English Homophones

Aye - Eye - I

- "Aye," He Said With A Chuckle.
- Her Eyes Are Beautiful
- I Will Be In Turkey Tomorrow.

Axel - Axle

- My Friends, Declared Axel.
- The Wheel Rotates Around An Axle.

Awe - Oar - Or - Ore

- The Sight Filled Us With Awe.
- This Boat Has Six Oars.
- Please Select On Shake Or Drink.
- They Used To Extract Iron Ore.

Away - Aweigh

- He is five minute away from my house.
- It's difficult to see aweigh in a sentence.

Common English Homophones

Aural – Oral

- The aural part was a beauty all of its own.
- We're having an oral test this week.

Hole – Whole

- There was a hole in his shirt.
- I like to eat whole banana.

Cereal – Serial

- They ate a large bowlful of cereal.
- She was watching a serial of Avengers.

Cell – Sell

- Our body has many cells.
- He was selling fishes.

Cent – Scent

- Tom won't charge you a cent.
- The dogs followed the fox's scent.